• We have studied the recent report of the Alabama State Chamber of Commerce covering the location of industrial plants in the state during 1959. It is a shock to us to learn that millions of dollars have been invested in new plants within a "stone's throw' of Florence while our city is conspicuous by its almost complete absence from the list. Within fifty miles of Florence, many fine plants have been established during the past year, bringing good payrolls to these communities. Although we are blessed with the proximity of giant industrial plants that are showing steady growth, still it seems that something must be amiss if we can not sell more smaller industries on the advantage of casting their lot with us.

Marcy Bradshaw Darnall

Marcy Bradshaw Darnall, 87, 838 Kendrick Street, Florence, editor and co-publisher of The Florence Herald, died at Coffee Memorial Hospital Monday night at 9 o'clock after a brief illness. He became ill Friday and was taken to the hospital Saturday for observation. Until a few moments before his death, he was fully conscious and was believed to be improving.

Mr. Darnall was born near Edgar, Ill., Jan. 27, 1872, and received his elementary education there. He attended Northwestern Normal School at Stanberry, Mo., but cut short his education to enter the newspaper field as a printer. On Jan. 23, 1899, he was married to Lutie Milliken. and on Saturday of next week they would have observed the 61st anniversary of their marriage.

A distinguished military career began when he first fantry during the Santiago Campaign, Spanish-American War, and later, 1901-1906, served as bandmaster, 9th U.S. Artillery Band. During World War I, he served as a lieutenant senior grade, U.S.N.R.F., and commanded the Key West (Fla.) Naval Training Station, later becoming executive officer and navigator of the USS Tallapoosa and then senior watch officer of the Battleship Louisiana.

During his years in Key West, he was editor and copublisher of the Key West Citizen, served as postmaster for eight years and also a term in the Florida House of Representatives. On Jan. 1, 1922, he moved to Florence following his purchase of The Florence Herald. A few years later, Mr. Darnall established Darnall's Newspaper Service, a syndicated editorial service serving more than 550 newspapers throughout the pation. He was the composer of numerous musical scores, mostly military marches, which included recorded numbers that had a wide sale a number of years ago.

Repeatedly honored for his editorial work and receiving numerous citations and trophies for the accomplishments of The Herald as a widely-read and nationally recognized weekly newspaper, Mr. Darnall also attained recognition in fraternal groups with which he was associated. He was a Mason, member of the Scottish Rite and Shrine; a member and past commander of Florence-Lauderdale Post No. 11, American Legion; a charter member and past president of the Florence Civitan club; an Elk, past commander, Spanish-American War Veterans, a life member of a number of professional organizations, and served as president of the Alabama Press

Funds To Begin Work On Wheeler Lock Included

President Eisenhower's plans for the biggest budget surplus in 13 years, a whopping $4,184,000.00, came as a welcome surprise to party leaders, though the President at the same time prosposed additional sources of revenue, one being that Congress levy an additional one-half cent per gallon gasoline tax, a penny to each 4-cent letter charge and a penny to the present 7-cent air mail rate.

The President indicated that these and other revenue measures are musts unless Congress is willing for the predicted surplus to be nulified and forego any chances for tax clashes after the November Estimating record revenues of $84 billion, he called for spending $79,816,000,000. The margin of $4 billion Mr. Eisenhower would use in reducing the public debt, thus cutting the interest some $200 million annually.

TVA's Share Most important to the people of the Tennessee Valley was that part of the budget concerning the Tennessee Valley Authority, the recommended appropriation for the agency in the 952-page budget being $20,520,000. Of this sum $4,050,000 would be set aside for the beginning of construction of a new 160x600 foot lock at Wheeler Dam which would, like the new Wilson Lock, permit the passage of far larger payloads and permit a speedier passage of river traffic as well. A part of this money allocated at Muscle Shoals would be used in finishing up the work of deepening the old lock at Wilson Dam and alterations to the railroad bridge at Florence. Let Us Use Common Sense

Recent observations on the farm situation by Senator John Sparkman seem to have more than a modicum of common sense and certainly point out a number of facts we should

The Senator points out that Congress has acted several times in the last four years, passing a comprehensive farm bill in 1956, a price support freeze in 1958, and in 1959 a sound tobacco and wheat bill. The President vetoed every one. Congress tried to solve the farm problem but Mr. Eisenhower, acting on Secretary of Agriculture Benson's advice nullified these major efforts.

Mr. Sparkman refers to the popular contention that farmers are subsidized too generously by price supports and loans. "The truth is," Mr. Sparkman avers, "that the farmer gets only about 10% of what the Federal Government pays out in the form of subsidies.

"It is said price supports bring about higher grocery bills. The truth is that in the last six years the Administration has reduced supports and farm income considerably but the cost of living is at an all-time high."

The role of price supports and loans, Mr. Sparkman emphasizes, are to prevent the farmers from being at the mercy of an unorganized market place. "Somehow," Mr. Sparkman says, "we must work out a program designed to give the farmer reasonable assurance that if he produces a crop he will get a fair price for it . . . I believe the following things are responsible for the farm problem:

"(1) the belief that if farm prices are low farmers will produce less; (2) belief by some that no acreage controls or price supports will solve the problem; (3) inadequate surplus disposal methods; (4) not enough emphasis on programs to help small family-size farms; (5) inadequate attention to research for new uses of farm products; and (6) failure to recognize the value of reasonable farm surpluses.

acted agricultural laws in the first place: to enable the farmer to receive a fairer return for his labor, to make sure that consumers get adequate food and fiber at reasonable prices, and to Extended In Tri-Cities stabilize the over-all economy.

"In order to reach these goals we need: (1) a high-gear program to seek new uses for farm products; (2) to take the 'kinks' out of our surplus disposal program and use this program as an instrument of peace overseas and to make certain there are no hungry mouths at home; (3) to scrutinize sharply our international trade policies in an effort to increase export of farm produce; (4) to curb excess production through Absentee Voting programs fair to both the farmer and the taxpayer; (5) to assure our farmers that they will get a fair price for what Law Explained they produce; and (6) to face up to the fact that the federal government has no choice but to take a hand in trying to solve the farm problem."

First Federal Assets Soar To Record High

THE FLORENCE HERALD, Florence, Alabama

Over Three Million Increase Over 1959; Total Over 221/2 Million Dollars

Assets of First Federal Savings Assets of First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Florence increased by a record $3,174,409.70 in 1959, reaching the all-time high figure of $22,586,889.08 at year's end, W. L. Foy, President, reported end, W. L. Foy, President, reported Mr. Foy reported to the institu-tion's annual meeting today that Union Carbide

despite intense competition for savings and the tightest home credit market in many years, First Federal Savings and Loan Association of Florence made "important gains on the thrift and home financing fronts in 1959." He said that many individuals stopped up the savings programs started to offset possible financial ill-effects of the 1958 recession. He added that this continued high level of savings, coupled with ever - increasing repayments on loans preciously made, enabled the Association to meet the vastly-increased demand for home loans that occurred in the community as the business climate improved.

The following are the highlights of First Federal Savings and Loan Association's 1959 operation: -1. A net increase in savings of $2,789,682.77, bringing total savings at year's end to $20,085.

and families continued and even

—2. A gain in savings accounts holders brought the total to more than 10,000 as of December 31.

—3. Record payments of earnings to savers for use of their funds, Dividends paid totaled more than $705,000.00 in 1959.

-4. A rise of $2,813,712.56 in the home mortgage loan portfolio, increasing the total of sound, quality home loans held by the insti-tution to $19,993,745.00 at year's

Mr. Foy forecast that business generally would be good in the year of 1960 and for First Federal it should mean an even better year than in the one just passed. He said "We will continue to maintain strength and safety and increase our services to meet the challenge of our rapidly changing economy. "Personal incomes should reach new highs," he said, "with consum-er expenditures expanding accordingly." "1960 should be one of the best building years on new housing," he concluded.

Modern Garbage System Studied

The board of commissioners said Tuesday that a new type garbage system for the business and industrial districts of Florence will be installed. This installation will save the city from $25,000 to $40,000 annually, it was stated.

Two systems of similar type are under consideration, and the board expects to make a cash outlay of from $40,000 to $60,000, in addition to the trade-in of the old system. Making a trip to Valdosta, Ga last week to see the Loadall system at work were Mayor E. F. Martin and Commissioners George Green and Alvah E. Hall. The commissioners will probably visit Knoxville to have a look at a similar system manufactured by the 13 Perry Como

LOOK OUT FOR DOG SNATCHERS

AT 2-3911

We have had a reappearance of a band of dog snatchers in the past two weeks. They pick up any dog any place they can catch one. One is known to be driving a stake body truck. Be on the lookout for it. They operate in daytime as well as at night. Keep an eye on your pet as much as possible, particularly in daytime. Should you see anyone pick up a dog that you know does not belong to them, get the license number and report it to the Police Department or the Humane Society immediately. If in the County, report it to the Sheriff's Office. Be sure to have a witness in any case.

Your Humane Society has three unmarked cars patrolling the streets in an effort to apprehend these people. Please give them your cooperation in this effort.

FOR THE SOUTH'S CONTINUED COUNT US IN! YOU BET WE Want to be counted in... for Southern Railway has no intention of being "among the missing" when it comes to working for the continued growth and progress of the territory we serve. As we have in the past, we will go right on doing everything we can to promote the prosperity and well-being of the modern South that means so much to all of us. This is no idle promise. It is, in fact, a part of our corporate creed: "To develop the territory we serve and to foster faith in the South, its people and its opportunities." It would take a long list, indeed, to include all those in the South today who are working for and looking toward a still greater future for America's "youngster" opportunity-land the modern South. DON'T BE A DAY LATE

Soap became a part of his daily life long before he understood its use. He's still more concerned with its bubbles than its cleansing properties-but he knows soap is mighty important.

And no one ever thought of postponing his bath until he was old enough to make decisions for himself!

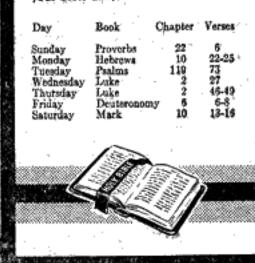

Wise parents never postpone a child's religious training. Long before he is able to reason, he needs the character-building and guidance of the Church. Christianity should become important to him in his daily experience before its truths can be fully grasped by his mind.

We are fortunate that our churches are equipped to instill a vital Christian faith in the youngest child. Fortunate is the boy or girl whose parents begin his religious training in their church's Nursery or Beginners' Department.

THE CHURCH FOR ALL ... ALL FOR THE CHURCH The Church is the greatest factor on earth for the building of character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual values. Without a strong Church, neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should atrend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake, (2) For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the Church itself, which needs his moral and material support. Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

Need For Group Action Discussed As Approach To Local Conservation

Groups of farmers in Lauderdale county considering irrigation, drainage, or similar projects may be eligible for credit assistance through the Farmers Home Administration's program of loans to associations for soil and water con-

FHA County Supervisor Lecil C. Mixon said the 3-member county FHA committee has recently discussed the need for group action as an approach to local soil and water conservation problems.

The agency makes loans to farmers' non-profit associations to carry out approved projects for irrigation, drainage, water supply and distribution systems, establishing reservoirs, diversion dams, pipelines and wells.

Association eligible for Farmers Home Administration loans are those whose credit needs cannot be supplied from other sources, and whose activities are to be jointly beneficial to several families. The main purpose of such an association must be to serve farmers. When an association reaches the point where another lender can handle its credit needs, it will be expected to repay its Farmers Home Administration loan.

The agency is authorized to lend an association up to $250,000, repayable over periods up to 40 Christmas Trees years depending on the repayment ability of the borrower, or the useful life of the project or of the Should Be Pruned security property.

Associations applying for losses obtain and pay for the technical aid they need, but the agency's engineers will see that proposed improvements are sound and that cost estimates and plans are com-

Although it's nearly a year until Church: Christmas, it's not too early to think about Christmas trees.

Of course, this applies to owners of Christmas tree plantations. plete, After a loan is made, the Some pruning or shearing work agency periodically inspects pro- during January can put money in gress to see that funds are used your pockets by December, says Training Union. The Rev. McDouformed parts or of double leaders (top shoot of a tree). Trees produced in a plantation need these operations to have an dvantage over wild Christmas

> Begin pruning when the trees are from two and one-half- to three-feet tall—usually from the second to fourth year. Martin recommends, pruning annually ex-cept in the harvest year, but he says that shearing is necessary only for shaping and decorative pur-

According to the forester, new growth on the main leader should be cut back and all side limbs cut back to match. If there is a double leader, the poorest should be cut or a forked tree will develop. Martin points out that hedge shears with an eight- or nine-inch blade are best, but a jackknife or grass shears can be used if the tree-number is small.

Pruning work starts slowly, adds the specialist, and two to three man-days per acre are usually needed. However, an operator will soon learn to size up a tree quickly, and he can complete the work in a minute or less.

Guide Prepared For Income Tax

It's that time of year again when farmers should be gather-ing information for completing income tax forms.

Although farmers could have filed an estimate by January 15 and paid the estimated amount of tax at that time, they must complete a regular return and pay any additional tax by April 15. Ac-cording to Extension Economist Foy Helms, most farmers prefer to do the whole job at once, and they will be making their returns before February 15. A Farmer's Tax Guide has been repared by the Internal Revenue Service, and most farmers will get a copy by mail from their county agent. However, anyone desiring a copy may obtain one by writing to the county Extension office. The A u b u r n University economist points out that there are few changes in income tax requirements for farmers this year, but the guide contains some new items and clearer explanations.

The increase in self-employment tax is one change for 1960. The rate was three and three-fourths percent for the 1959 tax yearhigher than for 1958-and it will go up another step in 1960.

Helms explains that the following are other things made clearer in this year's guide: the additional first-year depreciation that be-came efective last year; the difference between pasture income and pasture rental and the way to report each; how to report income from farm parnterships and what constitutes a partnership; and the way to calculate and report sales of timber from the farm.

Economist Sees

Tough Going For Farmers And Good Times For Business In'60

By FOY HELMS

Auburn University Extension Economist

THE 1960 outlook for business is good. Higher rates of economic activity and employment than was witnessed in 1959 are expected. Total consumer incomes, which in mid-1959 were some seven percent larger than a year earlier, may increase another four or five percent by mid-1960. And the per capita purchasing power will increase further in 1960.

How About The Farmer?

The story is different for the farmer. He had a good year in 1958 when his net farm income was 20 percent above 1957. He was the only one doing well while the recession was getting under way.

However, the picture changed in 1959, because net farm income was down 15 percent from 1958. The outlook for 1960 is for a further decline of perhaps seven and a half percent in net income. A further slight drop in average prices received by farmers is expected, while a slight rise in costs of farm production is almost a certainty. The cost-price squeeze will be tighter yet. Again, a further slight drop in retail food prices is expected. In summary, it appears that everyone except the farmer will see his financial position improved. This is another way of saying that the farmer will not share properly in the prosperous conditions that are likely to prevail in the United States this year.

Going Tough For Average Farmer

What will happen to the Alabama farmer under these conditions? Certainly the average Alabama farmer is going to find the going tough. The only way he can avoid it is to suddenly become well above average. This is most unlikely and the year's end will find many farmers in a very tight spot financially. Some farmers who have bought high-priced land or other capital items on credit or with little equity may face dire circumstances by the end of 1960 if they are dependent on the land for payment.

A good hard look at the prospects for the major commodities produced in Alabama may suggest a way out for some farmers.

The outlook for cotton is a good example. While ample, the supplies of cotton will not be too burdensome. Domestic consumption will remain at least as high as in 1959 and exports may be increased substantially. Prices are not expected to rise, but good Alabama farmers made money on cotton in 1959 and can do the same again barring a hard break from the weather. Remember though, for the last three years farmers generally have had better-than-average weather.

Average Feed Prices Little Lower

Feed supplies on hand suggest other possibilities. Total supplies of feed grains and other concentrates have been trending upward over the past seven years and are now at record levels. This means a little lower average prices for 1960. Alabama farmers who buy feed or feedstuff can benefit from these lower prices.

Other commodity highlights are as follows: Some improvements are likely markets for dairy, poultry, and eggs. Prices to farmers in the country as a whole for milk and butterfat will probably average higher than last year, while volume of dairy products and cash receipts from their sale may reach a new record. With higher costs except for feed, however, net income will probably not change much from 1959. This leaves the dairy enterprise as the most stable income producer in Alabama agriculture.

John Thomas May (above) of Gallion got his start in the sheep business as a 4-H Club member. Now he has 85 registered ewes and has won scores of championships and reserve championships in state and out of state show circuits. SEE STORY ON PAGE 5.

Reduced production of eggs and broilers in the first half of the year will probably strengthen prices for both of these commodities, but no big increases are expected.

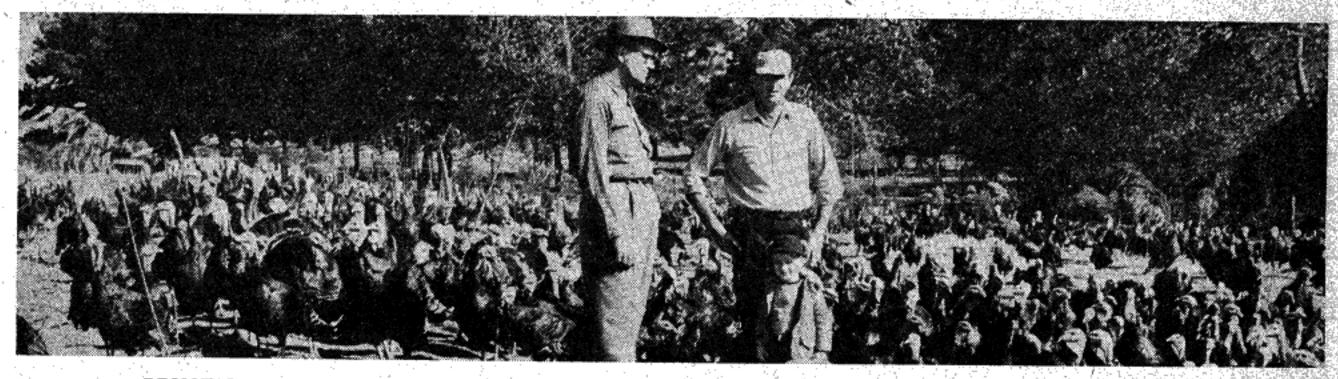

In meat animals, this year's production is expected to be somewhat larger than last year, but a very high level of demand should continue. Hog prices are likely to continue near present levels through the spring months. The total spring crop may be down slightly from last year with hog prices next fall and winter as high or higher than in the same period in 1959.

Total slaughter of cattle and calves will be larger than last. year. Any rise in cattle prices during the spring is unlikely to be as marked as last spring's rise, while somewhat lower prices are expected in the last half of the year as compared with 1959.

The demand for foods of all kinds will remain strong this year. and the supplies of fruits, vegetables, and nuts will be plentiful in most areas. The fresh market for vegetables will again offer good opportunities for some Alabama farmers.

The outlook for forest products is favorable. Construction, especially housing, will keep demand high for all lumber items. The demand for pulpwood will remain good at about the same price levels for stumpage. Other forest products including rosin will have a good year. The long time outlook for forest products in Alabama is even better than for 1960.

Marshall Countian Likes Diversification

BRUCE JETTON
Auburn Extension Service

M. G. Sumners has found the secret to making a good living from a small farm. The Marshall County farmer has developed a diversified program to make the maximum use of 50 acres of open land on his 74-acre place.

Of course, diversification is not the whole secret. Sumners has been a Farm and Home Development demonstrator for three years, and Assistant County Agent Ralph Sherer and Assistant Home Agent Opal Collins have been mighty helpful to him and his wife in working out a good program. "M. G. is now one of the best farmers we have," pointed out Agent Sherer.

The various enterprises on the Boaz Rt. 2 farm include turkeys, broilers, sheep, pimento peppers, corn, and grain sorghum. Last year was Sumner's third year to raise turkeys, and he is well pleased with the project. He marketed approximately 15,500 birds between August and January. However, some are sold the year around, said Sumners. Broiler turkeys are sold when they are 15 weeks old and weigh about eight pounds, some at 25 weeks and 20 pounds, and the Toms at 27 to 28 pounds. Part of his turkeys were grown under contract.

Sumners has been in the broiler business for six years and has three houses with a total capacity of 15,000. Grown under contract, a bonus is given for a conversion ratio over 38 pounds of meat per 100 pounds of feed. And Sumners, averaging 40 pounds of meat per 100 pounds of feed, usually collects a bonus.

The farmer only produces three batches of broilers a year since he starts the turkeys in the same houses.

After a year and a half of raising sheep, Sumners has 31 ewes. He uses a registered Montadale ram for breeding. For grazing last summer, Sumners had five acres of Starr millet, and during the first part of October he planted eight acres of oats. Two acres of Abruzzi rye were planted during the middle of September to give the sheep early grazing. The FHD farmer also has a quarter-acre nursery plot of coastal bermuda from which he will establish two more acres next spring.

Although he averaged 35 bushels of corn per acre on part of his 12-acre corn field, Sumners was a little disappointed over the crop this year. He fertilized it with 300 pounds of 4-12-12 and side-dressed part of the crop with 66 pounds of nitrogen and the rest with 80 pounds of nitrogen per acre. But he just didn't get rain at the right time, explained Agent Sherer.

The 20 acres of grain sorghum Sumners planted did better than his corn, producing a little higher yield per acre. He combined nine acres of this crop and let the turkeys harvest the other 11 acres.

Sumners was also pleased with his first pimento pepper crop. The peppers were grown on contract for a canning company in Cullman, and Sumners sold over nine tons from three acres. The crop was fertilized with 800 pounds of 4-12-12 and about 27 pounds of nitrogen per acre.

Farm Man-Hours Drop To New Low

Agriculture used an estimated 11.1 billion manhours of work in 1958—the smallest number in more than 50 years. Compare this with 11.4 billion the year before, 16.8 billion 10 years before that, and 23.3 billion 30 years ago.

With the drop in man-hours in 1958, total farm output was nine percent above the two previous years and 24 percent above the 1947-49 average.

Farm output per man-hour was more than four times as high as before World War I and almost three times as high as immediately before World War II. Each worker averaged enough food, fiber, and tobacco to supply himself and about 22 others.

Honey Bees And Pollination

Honey and the bees that make it are more important than we sometimes realize. The honey bee does a highly beneficial job in pollinating many of our most important pasture plants, fruit trees, and other crops.

The southeastern honey crop was generally good this year, although excessive early rainfall reduced the crop in some areas. And further reduction in nectar flow occurred, also, due to later dry weather. There were 185,000 colonies of bees in Alabama on July 1 as shown by the Crop Reporting Service. This is a decrease of three percent from a year earlier. In the U.S. the 5,437,000 colonies of bees now on farms are about the same as a year

Need More Sheep

Could you use more money? Try spring lambs. Together with the wool they produce, these animals are high profit-makers on many farms; and I think they should be on many more.

Alabama's 1959 lamb crop totaled 43,000 head. Wool production last year is estimated at 340,000 pounds. Both lamb and wool crops are off from 1958. Yet lambs and wool are two important products high in demand-about the only ones not in surplus. We need more of them.

In 1957 sheep and lambs sold brought Alabama farmers $799,000. This was more income than came from such familiar products as turkeys, oats, sweet corn, crimson clover seed, and syrup.

Farmers Biggest Farmland Buyers

Active farmers are still the most frequent buyers of farmland. They bought more than threefifths of all farms and parcels of farmland sold during the 12 months ending last March 1. Nonfarmer purchasers accounted for a little more than a third of the tracts changing hands. Nearby land was most attractive to buyers with 77 percent of the buyers living in the county or on land adjacent to the county where the land was purchased.

Overall, market values of farmland continued to rise during the spring and early summer of 1959, with the July 1 new record level at one per cent above March 1.

Human Stomach Limits Food Consumption

It's the 40-ounce container—the human stomach -through which all food passes that limits the food consumed in the U.S. And while dietary habits may change, the changes will be in kinds of foods and not in total calorie intake.

Since 1910, trends in the pattern of food consumption saw the per capita potato consumption go down about one-half and cereal consumption go down about one-fourth. On the other hand, per capita consumption of dairy products, eggs, meats, and fruits and vegetables has risen.

I see no reason why this trend will not continue as the material standard of living rises in the U. S. Because more acreage is required to get the same number of calories from livestock and livestock products, the shift of dietary habits in that direction will take more agricultural resources per person.

Jr., Lowndes County, third vice president; Mrs. Mahlon LeCroix, Limestone County, secretary; Mrs. Roscoe Kelley, Pike County, parliamentarian; Mrs. Boyd Vaughan, Calhoun County, director; Mrs. K. B. Sims, Etowah County, district director, and Mrs. John Lee, Pickens County, president. Not shown is Mrs. Cecil Loyd Jr. of Stephenson, second vice president.

LMORE County farmers bagged over 10,-2 000 bales of cotton from 12,600 acres last year. About a month ago when County Agent J. E. Morriss was figuring the yield, he said cotton producers averaged 407 pounds of lint per acre in that county. That's considerably under the 518-pound average in 1958.

It's not that farmers haven't followed good production practices as they did in 1958 other factors enter into the picture, you know.

Cotton Allergic To Acid. Soil tests have shown that about 50 percent of the cotton fields in Hale County are too acid to make top yields.

John Deavours figures it this way. One pound of phosphate produces more cotton when the soil pH is 6.0 (slightly acid) than two pounds at a pH of 5.1 (more acid). The Hale County Agent says his cotton farmers can't afford not to test their soils because of the limited acreage and the cost of producing the crop.

BYRD

Wouldn't this be true in other areas of the state?

How Do You Store Corn? Not long ago I was watching a corn picker-sheller swallowing up row after row of 75-bushel-peracre corn-turning out almost a bushel of shelled corn per minute. This was on Joe Martin Stallings' farm near Dothan in Houston County.

George McMillan, Houston's farm agent, told me that Mr. Stallings is bagging the shelled corn in 100-pound bags with about one percent premium grade malathion added per bag-that's six pounds per 100 bushels. With this treatment and the heavy paper bags, Mr. Stallings' corn should stay fairly free of insect damage.

"Rats won't bother it as much, either, as they would if stored loose or in cloth bags," says the farm owner.

Looks okay to me. What do you think?

Triple Use Crop. Getting all you can from a crop is becoming more important these days-another way of cutting per-unit

This story is told by J. J. Young, Cherokee County agent. He says one farmer-not in his county—sowed 35 acres of oats last Oct. 12 and applied the proper amounts of plant food. One hundred and 11 yearlings grazed the area three months. During this time each animal was fed five pounds of crushed corn per day. The average gain was one and a half pounds per day or about 150 pounds each for the three months.

The cattle were removed and the oats were again fertilized. The yield was 55 bushels per acre.

Did the man lose or gain? As expenses he had 17,500 pounds of mixed fertilizer, 10,500 pounds of nitrate fertilizer, 105 bushels of oat seed, about 770 pounds of crushed corn, and land preparation expense. On the credit side he had 1665 pounds of beef gains and 1815 bushels of oats.

"My pencil is not good at figures," says Young, "but after liberal expense allowances the man must have had more than $2,000 left."

N. E. Younis Enters Broiler Business

Ozark Couple Creates Own Market Prepares Broilers To Suit Customer

JIM HUBBARD

Auburn Extension Poultryman

MR. and Mrs. N. E. Younis of Ozark are, in their own words, "making the best profits possible raising and selling broilers."

The first question you might ask, however, is how do they operate their broiler business for such profits? Their program includes all of the services from the production of broilers to retailing the cooked product to the consumer. The Younises produce the broilers, dress them in their own small processing plant, and retail them ready-to-cook or in an already cooked form.

Their broiler business surely caught my attention when I was eating some of the delicious fried chicken in Mr. and Mrs. Younis' chicken cafe and retail market at Ozark. And you will be as interested as I was in the details of how they got started in this operation. Here is their story as it was told to T. G. Hubbard, Dale County assistant county agent, and me.

"Without experience in raising poultry, we started raising broilers in 1948," began the Younises. "We had just purchased a farm and built one broiler house with a capacity of 1500 broilers. Then we decided to dress our own broilers and retail them, so we added a small dressing plant to the farm."

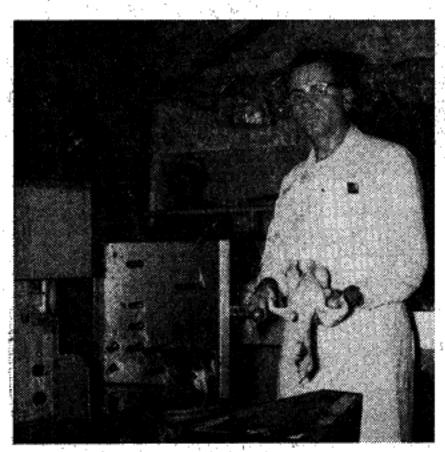

Due to good planning and a lot of hard work, the Younises now have eight broiler houses with a capacity of 12,000 broilers. "We have also moved our dressing plant to a central location in Ozark near our specialized chicken retail market where broilers are sold to customers from Ozark and surrounding areas. These broilers are available for Mrs. Homemaker in stages from dressed birds to a chicken dinner that is ready to eat. The customer can buy whole, dressed broilers or cut-up broilers to take home and cook. If the homemaker does not feel like cooking on a particular day, she can obtain the chickens barbecued or fried to take home, or if she wants to eat out, we also serve fried and barbecued chicken dinners in this same place of business.

"The broilers are fried in two broasters. The broasters fry chicken in six minutes in a vegetable oil which is under pressure. Fried chicken that comes out of these broasters is delicious, juicy, and makes a customer want to return for more," say the Younises.

Their broilers are barbecued on a gas rotisserie-type barbecuer in their place of business. Potato chips, salad, and a drink are served with the fried chicken dinners. You can now see that Mr. and Mrs. Younis have a specialized business for dressing and selling broilers they produce.

To make better use of their small chicken dressing plant, they also custom dress chickens for the public and buy hens to dress and sell through their specialized chicken marbet

To complete the story of the Younises' broiler operation, you will be interested in knowing how they dispose of the poultry manure from the broiler houses. Mr. Younis started by developing good grass pastures on his farm. Using the litter to fertilize his pastures, he has developed excellent grazing for growing out his stocker cattle.

EVEN though spring is more than two months away, it's time to start planning those game food patches for this year. In fact, selected quail patches should be broken and harrowed now to enable the soil to store plenty of moisture and to make spring planting easier.

Quail Crops to Plant

Common, Korean (North Alabama only), and Kobe lespedeza may be planted in February. Incidentally, annual lespedeza seed are more frequently eaten by quail than other top quail crops because wild stands are found distributed over Alabama. Number one choice for quail is bicolor lespedeza. Plant seedlings before the spring sap rises, or plant seed in rows after frost. Seed will do just as well as seedlings provided you prepare a good seedbed and plant scarified seed. Large partridge peas are also excellent for quail.

Reseeding Cowpeas

Something that may prove most promising to doves, quail, and especially deer and wild turkeys is the reseeding cowpea. Aubrey Edmonds, Livingston, Alabama, shot several quail in an old pea patch in February, 1952. All craws were packed with speckled cowpeas, and by warm spring weather, the patch was again green with cowpeas that volunteered from the unharvested seed the previous year. Edmonds saved seed from this patch and has kept the wild strain going. The Fort Benning Fish and Game Association has tried the peas experimentally and believe they will do well for deer and turkey.

What Size Shot for Quail?

I prefer 8's in the regular load, but 6's and 9's are probably just as good. The improved cylinder is the preferred choke. Try to figure where the covey will fly when flushed, and you can bet it will be towards nearby cover. Work behind the birds so you can get straightaway shots. My Dad taught me to knock down the first bird that zooms upward and then work in another unhurried shot.

When And Where

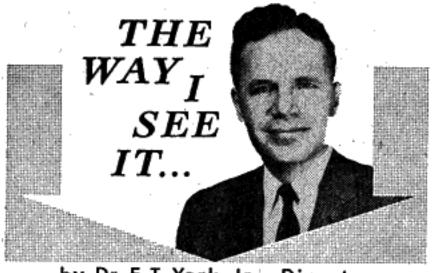

You can shoot squirrel and woodcock South of U. S. Highway 80 through January 15. And raccoon, opossum, and rabbit are legal game through February 20.

Runner Oak For Food

A potential feed plant for deer, turkey, and quail is the runner oak. This is a midget oak tree that is full grown at 18 inches and bears fruit resembling water oak acorns. I have a few runners which I got from Dr. Maurice Baker and Dan Speake of the Alabama Wildlife Research Unit to use in a test they are running at Auburn. The tree is native in the Gulf Coast counties and has been reported seen in Geneva, Escambia, and Washington counties.

While in Mobile County, I saw several dwarf live oaks about five feet high bearing acorns. These could have feed possibilities, too. It may be that none of these trees will grow outside their native habitat, but they are worth research work. The destruction of hundred-year-old oak trees by timber companies is destroying a great amount of deer and turkey food, and these small oaks might prove of some benefit.

This Month In Rural Alabama

by Dr. E.T. York, Jr. - Director Auburn University Extension Service

I am looking forward very much to the opportunity which this column provides to visit with the readers of "This Month in Rural Alabama" for a few minutes each month.

Through this medium we shall likely be discussing many subjects such as the major problems confronting the farmer today and the opportunities and potentials for further development. We would also like to consider some of the programs and plans of the Extension Service through which we hope to help solve some of agriculture's problems as well as to assist in the realization of some of its opportunities.

Serious Situation—Certainly, agriculture is confronted today with a very unusual but serious situation. Last year, the total production of agricultural commodities was the highest in the nation's history—25 percent above the level of only 10 years ago. Yet, net farm income was some 15 percent below that of last year. A further drop of some seven to eight percent is predicted for next year. There has been a rather steady decline in net farm income almost every year since the end of World War II. And today the prices of farm products are at 77 percent of parity—the lowest point in 19 years.

Perhaps one of the best indications of the farmer's plight is the fact that last year, while making up some 12 percent of the population, he received only three percent of the nation's net income.

One of the most disturbing features of this situation is that a vast majority of the public seems to have the impression that the farmer is rolling in dough—that he is getting fat at the expense of the consumer and the public treasury.

Farmer's Share Small—Of course, nothing could be further from the truth as these income figures indicate. Actually, the farmer is receiving a smaller share of the consumer's dollar today than at any time before in history—only 38 cents. And while food prices increased 32 percent between 1946 and 1958, the farmer received only fourtenths of one percent of that increase—despite the fact that all of his operating cost went up very sharply during this period. This accounted for the rapid decline in net farm income.

From 1952 to 1957, a period of steadily increasing inflation, farm prices actually decreased 20 percent. As a result, food prices during this period remained stable. However, if food prices had gone up at the same rate as other items, we would have paid some 25 percent more for food and clothing. Consumers would have paid more than 70 billion dollars more for agricultural products during this period. Therefore, we can say that the farmer actually subsidized the consumer to this extent.

$20 Million Saved Daily—As a result of the increased efficiency of the American farmer, the consumer saves millions of dollars every day. In fact, the take-home pay from an hour of labor will buy from two to three times as much food today as that hour of labor would 20 years ago. Furthermore, the Department of Agriculture estimates that if farmers were farming today just as they

Sheep On Alabama Farms

BOB FARQUHAR

Auburn Extension Livestockman

A final glance at 1959 before we settle down to a new year and a forward look into Alabama's sheep world is in order, I think. Certainly, several folks need recognizing for their fine work over the past year.

Aubrey Smith, superintendent of the Black Belt Substation, is well pleased with last year's lambing at the station. Bucks were turned in with the ewes on June 10th, and by November 12 Smith had a 125 percent living lamb crop from his established flock. These lambs and their mothers enjoyed excellent grazing on oats and frosted Johnson grass. The grazing land was fallowed early and an unbelievable stand of volunteer oats came up. The results could easily be seen in the lambs—they looked good.

Dr. Leslie Cole is proud of his 99 percent lamb crop, and Dr. Earl Wiggins informed me that from Oct. 10 to 31, over 50 percent of his ewes had lambed. All of this points out that Alabama can have an early lamb crop and that good animal husbandry man-

We were well pleased with the sheep show at Birmingham this past October. Some 250 sheep from eight different states were shown. John Thomas May of Gallion is to be congratulated on the excellent showing made with his Montadales. May's interest in sheep started as a 4-H Club project. How about your boy? Ten ewes of his own could grow into real money from a small initial investment just as May's did.

May exhibited top Montadales at all shows that he entered this year. The champion Montadale ewe and the reserve champion ewe of the Alabama State Fair, held in Birmingham in October, were from the May flock. Among other awards, May also claimed the reserve champion ram and the breed trophy for the best flock.

At three Texas shows held in Houston, San Antonio, and Ft. Worth, May won a total of 18 first places out of a possible 27. He had four out of six champions and five out of six reserve champions. One winner, a ram lamb weighing 180 pounds at 11 months, went on to win third place in the National Show and Sale in Springfield and topped the sale at $500.

May's ewes placed fifth, sixth, and eighth in a class of 75 at the national show, and they brought an average of $242.59.

Having begun his registered sheep operation in 1949 with 18 head, May now has 85 registered ewes. The present head sire of his flock is the 1956 national reserve champion ram.

According to May, a small show sponsored by Sears Roebuck and Company initiated his interest in showing sheep. He says that he would like for Alabama to have a show for 4-H and FFA members so that the state will eventually have more breeders.

"The three big problems of raising sheep are internal parasites, dogs, and breeding control," says May. He uses a recommended drench for worms, kills stray dogs on his farm, and shears the animals twice a year to help promote an early lamb crop.

Ways To Stretch Food Dollar

By DOROTHY OVERBEY
Auburn Extension Service

FOOD takes the largest bite out of the family's pay check.

In fact, food accounts for about one-fourth the money that passes through the family's hands. Moreover, food prices are increasing from year to year. It is not nearly as hard to carry home $10 worth of groceries today as it was just a few short years ago. It's not because we are getting stronger, either; were 15 years ago, the American consumer would be paying some 20 million dollars more each day for food. Why don't we give more emphasis to this 20 million dollars daily saving rather than to the one million dollars in surplus storage cost we hear so much about. We should recognize that the consumer would not be able to realize this saving if it were not for the increased production which also gave us the surpluses.

One of our Congressmen told me recently that it would be almost hopeless to expect the passage of any constructive farm legislation during the next session because there was such strong sentiment against it from the 88 percent of the people comprising the non-farm public.

This suggests that before we can hope to solve some of agriculture's most pressing problems, we must regain the support and sympathy of the non-farm public. One of our greatest needs, therefore, is a strong and aggressive public relations program to present the true facts to the people. And this is long overdue!

our food dollar just doesn't buy as much.
There are ways, however, for the family to shave pennies and perhaps dollars from the food budget.

The first step is buying foods in season. During every month of the year there are foods that are plentiful and low in price. Make it a point to learn what these foods are and plan to serve them often. Put special emphasis on the foods that are apt to be bargains and you'll save money.

Pay attention to the cost per serving. We can't eat bone, and many of us don't like to eat much fat. If the cut of meat you have selected has a lot of bone and fat, chances are that the cost per serving will be high. The smart shopper looks beyond the price per pound. The same thing applies to fruits and vegetables. If there is a lot of trimming waste, the cost per pound may be deceiving.

Get the most out of high priced items. Your family will soon tire of meals if they are all prepared from the lowest price ingredients available. But there are ways of making the higher cost foods go further. For instance, if cucumbers are expensive use them as a minor ingredient in a tossed salad. By using your imagination, you will find many ways to get extra mileage from the more expensive foods. Then use them often when they are plentiful and their price drops.

Don't be the first to use a food when it comes to market. The first part of any crop is apt to be high priced. Later on, as the marketing season progresses, prices will drop and the quality will often improve. Those first strawberries will look good, but wait a

St. Clair FHD Farmer Manages Farm Timber Land Like An Expert

WOODLOT MANAGEMENT—The key to woodlot management is a periodic selective cutting and thinning operation. Here, Assistant County Agent W. D. Jackson, left, and John Coker of Ashville Rt. 2 inspect a recent thinning operation on Coker's St. Clair County woodland.

"MY son's 4-H Club forestry project interested me in a timber management and reforestation program," declared John M. Coker of Ashville Rt. 2.

The St. Clair County Farm and Home Development farmer recalled that young John Franklin planted several hundred pine seedlings when he was just a little fellow beginning 4-H Club work. And practically every one of the young trees lived.

"I saw my farm in a different light after that," said Coker. "I attended a forestry field day demonstration presented by the county Extension agents and learned that I could do a lot of the things required in a forestry management program."

Since then, Coker has girdled 100 acres of hardwoods and interplanted with pine trees. On another 60 acres he thinned the stand by selective cutting of pulpwood and saw timber. From just five acres he cut 25 cords of pulpwood and 6,000 board feet of lumber, and the remaining timber stand is in better condition than before the thinning operation. From the entire 60 acres he expects to get a total of 115 cords of pulpwood and 45,000 board feet of lumber just by thinning the stand.

Six years ago Coker sold 100 cords of pulpwood off the same 60 acres. At that time he had a paper company forester mark the trees. But now he does his own marking and cutting, using family labor and an occasional hired laborer.

In addition to the knowledge gained through visits to the county agent's office and field day demonstrations on forestry, Coker has learned a lot through experience. When he started marking and cutting his own timber, he learned the importance of proper spacing of trees. Taking out the culls and diseased trees was no problem since this practice is a must in a good management program. However, thinning out good trees to leave growing room for the others was not quite so easy.

Coker tries to thin according to age and closeness of trees in a stand, making sure to leave the highest possible number for fast, efficient growth. In thinning older pine stands, he leaves sufficient space between the standing trees so that the tips of the branches just barely touch. This way natural or artificial reforestation can take place providing replacement trees for the next thinning and, at the same time, building future timber and pulpwood sales.

Important in a properly managed woodlot are the following practices:

- Provide adequate fire lanes throughout the woodland area.
- 2. Follow selective cutting and thinning practices recommended by your Extension agents and foresters.
- 3. Provide for natural reseeding or reset thin areas with seedlings.

This thrifty farmer has also plowed fire lanes around all of his woodlots.

Besides his forestry program Coker has a commercial beef herd and an egg production business, and he is a part-time industrial worker at Gadsden. A leader in the county, he is vice president of the Friendship Community Club and is a director in the St. Clair Farm Bureau.

About two-thirds of all hunting accidents can be traced to three causes: humans in the line of fire, mistaking humans for game, and careless handling of firearms, which includes hunting with the safety catch off.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture says that 100 million meat carcasses were inspected and stamped "OK" in the 1958-59 fiscal year.

Electric Cable In Trough Keeps Water Temperature Up

BOB SHARMAN

Auburn Extension Service

THE egg producer's big problem this time of the year is water freezing in the water troughs for his laying flock.

Many approaches have been made to this problem but none have been entirely satisfactory. Producers in Blount County are still hunting the best method. But according to County Agent D. S. Loyd, the solution to this problem lies in the hands of the individual and his particular setup.

Some egg producers have even tried using the water from water heaters. This has proved fairly satisfactory but mechanical difficulties keep popping up. Still, a few are using this method today.

Then there are those who prefer the plastic covered heating cable. Being plastic, this cable is easy to install during winter and remove during summer. One of the big hitches, however, is that farmers often fail to remove the cable and when the water gets low in the trough the chickens sometimes peck through the plastic coating. Besides, any portion of the cable that sticks out of the water is likely to burn out.

One of the newer approaches to the freezing problem is being tried by L. E. Buckner of Oneonta Rt. 4. He operates a 6,000-layer farm in the Hoods Crossroads community and has been in business for four years. At first he tried the water heater system, but when it blew up on him he decided to change to another method.

Now Buckner is using a lead jacketed heating cable. He used it for the first time last year and was pleased with results. This year he plans to put it in two other houses. The cable consists of an asbestos wrapped wire coated with plastic and a lead jacket. The lead jacket makes the cable heavy enough to stay in the bottom of the trough. Too, chicks are not likely to peck holes in it.

Working closely with Buckner on this problem are Frank Denney, rural engineer with TO PREVENT FREEZING—Freezing weather does more than make egg gathering an uncomfortable job. A dip in the mercury can take a sizeable bite out of your poultry profits when it causes the drinking water in your poultry house to freeze, says L. E. Buckner of Oneonta Rt. 4. Through the help of Frank Denney, Alabama Power Company representative, and County Agent D. S. Loyd, Buckner has installed lead cables in the water troughs to prevent freezing and loss of profits.

the Alabama Power Company, and Agent Loyd. Denney estimates the cost of the lead cable at about 11 cents per foot. At present the cable works satisfactory only in lengths of 55 feet or longer. For shorter watering troughs modifications would have to be made.

While realizing that the problem is not yet completely solved, Denney thinks they are making headway. In his radius of work, he is helping about 15 other farmers who plan to use the lead cable this year.

Cotton, Corn, Peanut Seed Outlook

Late Shoppers End Up With Poor Quality Seed

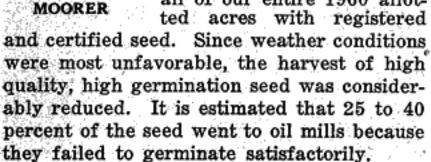

MELVIN M. MOORER

Auburn Extension Agronomist

SEED growers of Alabama made a real effort during 1959 to produce a large supply of genetically pure cottonseed, hybrid corn seed, and peanut seed under the state seed certification program. Acreages produced on all three crops were increased over the 1958 amounts. However, acreage-wise, the production of registered and certified cottonseed made the largest expansion. The acreage of cotton produced under our certifica-

The acreage of cotton produced under our certification program during 1958 jumped from approximately 23,000 acres in 1958 to 40,000 acres in 1959. These 40,000 a c r e s produced enough seed to plant almost all-of our entire 1960 allotted acres with registered

The minimum germination requirements on registered and certified cottonseed have been reduced from 80 to 75 precent, and cottonseed germinating at this percentage are tagged sub-standard in germination. By completing certification on all of our 75 percent germination cottonseed, it is estimated that registered and certified seed producers in Alabama will have enough genetically pure seed to plant 60 to 75 percent of the 1960 Alabama cotton crop.

The cottonseed situation in most other Southern states is about the same as we have in Alabama. Other states have reported losing as much as 50 percent of their 1959-produced cottonseed due to extremely poor germination. For this reason, seedsmen in other states will be bidding for a large portion of Alabama's high germinating seed. In fact, a large volume of our certified and registered cottonseed has already moved into other states.

I would say that the over-all outlook for high quality, genetically pure cottonseed for planting in 1960 is not too good. Making early arrangements for your 1960 needs will enable you to get high quality, genetically pure certified seed of recommended varieties for planting this year's crop.

The 1959 cotton variety report had not been released at the time this information was compiled, but we do not anticipate any major changes over the 1958 report. Therefore, I suggest that you use the 1958 report as a guide until the 1959 report is released.

At the present time, the hybrid seed corn picture looks some better than the cotton picture. The majority of our hybrid seed corn crop was harvested without too much damage, and it appears that the supply of high quality, genetically pure hybrid seed will be adequate to meet demands. The supply of some varieties may be short as the planting season progresses, but all of our farmers should be able to get hybrid seed corn of a recommended variety for 1960.

Here again, the corn variety report of 1959 was not available at the time this story was written, so use the 1958 report as a guide in selecting the variety you will use during 1960.

The supply of peanut seed for use in 1960 looks fairly good at the present time. This statement is based on seed peanuts that are harvested but are still in the hull. We will not know too much about the quality of the seed from the standpoint of germination until early spring—after the peanuts have been shelled and tested.

Mrs. Patterson Uses Preserved Flowers In Arrangement

Preserving Flowers With Sand Is Latest Technique Of Homemakers

By BRUCE JETTON

Auburn Extension Service

ALMOST every home demonstration club member you talk to preserves food. But Mrs. Malcolm Patterson of Madison County is one who preserves flowers.

Mrs. Patterson, president of the county HD council and past president of the Meridianville HD Club, dries and preserves flowers as a hobby. And she made 265 individual, miniature, dried flower favors for the annual achievement day program last year, according to Home Agent Oneone

Explaining how she preserves the flowers, Mrs. Patterson says she first cuts the heads off the stems. These are placed in separate containers which are filled with sand. Part of the secret of Mrs. Patterson's success is the way she arranges the flowers in the sand, points out Agent Cook. Instead of just dumping the sand over the flowers, Mrs. Patterson puts the blossoms on top of a layer of sand and then fills in around the edges. At intervals the container is shaken to settle the sand in between the petals. In this manner, the original shape of the individual petals is retained

The foliage is taken off the stem and dried separately by the same process. The different parts stay in the sand until all the moisture is taken out. Then they are removed, hung up for a while, and all parts are glued back together in their original form on the stem.

Used in arrangements just as fresh flowers are, it's difficult to tell Mrs. Patterson's preserved flowers from those freshly cut from the garden. And they will last for several years, or until they are worn out or damaged, according to the talented homemaker.

few weeks and they will taste just as good and cost a lot less.

Always be alert to food bargains while you are doing your shopping. Keep your food plans flexible so that you can take advantage of a good buy. But while bargains are nice, be sure your family can make use of them before you bring them home. It's no bargain if most of it ends up in the garbage pail.

Some families can make a substantial savings by not wasting money on unnecessary diet supplements. The best source of vitamins and minerals is a well balanced diet. A normal individual has no need for expensive vitamin or mineral preparations. If you are not feeling "up to snuff," see your doctor and let him decide whether you need extra supplements in your diet.

The same thing is even true of the multitude of "health" foods on the market. There is nothing magical about any food. No single food has any wonderful health giving powers. Eat a well balanced diet and you won't need expensive health foods. Money spent on these items is money wasted.

One other factor to consider when comparing the cash register receipts and your bag of groceries is the non-food items that are undoubtedly included in the package. Such items as cigarettes, cleaning supplies, and other household items are often purchased in the grocery store, but cannot be considered a food expense. It is enlightening to subtract the cost of these items from the grocery bill. We are sometimes paying less for groceries than we think.

pelleted concentrate. Fast eating is desirable when dairy cows are milked in parlors and eating time is limited. An 84-day Auburn test revealed that cows eat pelleted concentrate faster than unpelleted feeds. In one test, milk production and butterfat percentage were similiar for cows on both concentrate forms. In another study using pellets made from a different feed mixture, there was a slight decrease in butterfat content.

MEAT ADVERTISING. Most housewives are exposed to meat advertising. This was learned in a 1959 survey of 529 Alabama households. It was found that 95 percent of urban households have television or radio, or both, and 75 percent of the housewives read daily newspapers. Over half (55 percent) said they watched meat advertising to check on price, quality, and new preparation ideas.

burning of woods is harmful to pine growth. This was proved on experimental plots established some 30 years ago by the Auburn Agricultural Experiment Station. Results show that small tree seedlings are killed by fire every year and no new trees become established. Thus, growth and yield of wood products is small.

LIME FOR CORN. Liming corn land almost doubled yield in an experiment at Auburn, as compared with yield on a very acid soil. The very acid field (pH 5.0) had a top yield of 36 bushels per acre, while on a well limed soil (ph 6.3) with the same amount of fertilizer, yield was 68 bushels. Zinc was applied in the fertilizer on the limed soil.

PLANTING BLUEBERRIES. Blueberries can be grown anywhere in Alabama in home gardens or for commercial uses. New varieties that show promise and are recommended for the state are Tifblue, Homebell, Menditoo, and Garden Blue. Planting is done from November until March, preferably on moist soil, and watering is needed during dry periods for the first year or two. Two varieties planted together insure cross pollination.

APPLE DISEASES. Failure to properly prune apple orchards can cause failure of a regular fungicidal spray program for diseases. For controlling black rot, bitter rot, and fireblight, sanitation by pruning out and burning all blighted twigs, fruit spurs, dead wood, and cankers is essential. Destroying this material is important because along with mummied fruit, it is a source of primary infection in the spring.

GARDEN PLANNING. Needs for processing should be considered when planning home gardens. In addition to needs for fresh use, the following are suggested to provide vegetables for freezing and canning for a family of five: 200 row-feet each of turnip greens (Shogoin), pole beans (Blue Lake), lima beans (Henderson), field peas (Giant Blackeye), and English peas (Victor Freezer); 100 row-feet each of okra (Clemson Spineless), broccoli (Early Green Sprouting), and cucumbers (Model); 300 row-feet of tomatoes (Homestead No. 24); 400 rowfeet of sweet corn (Aristogold No. 1); and 50 row-feet of beets (Crosby's Egyptian). Selections vary with location and preference, but these crops and varieties have been good in Auburn tests.
